A Pretty Maiden Prevented from Flying with Her Lover.

False Hair and Blasted Hopes.

'Twas midnight in Memphis. The city was wrapped in fog and slumber, and the only sign of life was a tardy lover kissing his girl good night at her door step.

Just as the sound of the departing lover's footsteps had died away in the distance a carriage, drawn by a pair of black horses, dashed around the corner. Halting in front of a pretty cottage, young man sprang out, and, whispering something to the driver, the latter drove rapidly away, but halted within hailing distance.

Uttering a low whistle, the young man dodged behind a door-frame and waited. Presently there was the usual scratching sound that accompanies the raising of a window. Upon hearing the sound, the young man left the friendly shelter of the doorway and repeated the whistle, this time more softly.

FIRE! FIRE! FIRE! the loud alarm bells, Brazen bells!
a tale of terror, now, their turbulancy if
in the startled ear of night,
How they scream out their affright,
Too much horrified to speak,
They can only shrick, shrick
Out of time.

n a clamorous appealing to the mercy of the fir n > mad expostulation with the deaf and frant Leaping higher, higher, higher,
With a desperate desire
And a resolute endeavor
Now-new to sit-or never,
e side of the pale-faced moon.
The bells, bells, bells!
What a tale their terror tells Of depaur!

Is there anything more appalling? Is there anything more fearful? How those fire bells bring you from your bed at night when the cry of fire is sounded! How those engines tear down the street, hear the horses pant; and in the faces of the freemen you can see the heart throbs who can guess who may return, or how many lives may be consumed? As we have been taught to dread the fires of a futhave been taught to dread the fires of a fut-ure world, so we dread them here. What desolation! How many ruined men, and how many ruined altars has the fire fiend made? Only ye children of want can tell. Stop! Read! Think, and analyzs. Ye men who have buildings and who have wives and children the fire fiend may escape from your own houses while you are asleep and the red torch lick up your property and the lives of those you hold dear. There is a remedy, a never-failing remedy. Let us stop so many firee, and this destruc-tion of life and property. "Hibbard's Own Aebestos Paint" is king of fire and water. "Hibbard's Own Asbestos Paint" is king of fire and water.

It will not burn, and wood when painted will not burn. Look to your shingle roofs. "Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth!" The city of Portland, Me., was burned down by a fire-cracker. If the buildings of Chicago had been painted with this wonderful paint there would have been no fire. The Newhall House, at Milwaukee, is another example. See the lives that were, lost there! "Asbestos Paint" would have prevented it. Let us stop these fires. Come to us and we will be the savior of your property, and many lives will be saved. We are a progressive people, and "Hibbard's Own Asbestos Paint" is king of fire and water. See F. M. Hibbard & Co., at the Clarendon Hotel. Don't sleep till you see them.
